Handling of Classes in Emergencies

In cases where classes must be cancelled in the event of an emergency situation such as the suspension of public transportation due to a large-scale accident or because of natural disasters including typhoons, torrential rain, snow, and earthquakes, announcements will be posted on the university website, etc.

Student Website → Selecting the Faculty /
Graduate School → Classes → Schedules
[https://www.students.keio.ac.jp/en/com/
class/schedule/emergency.html](https://www.students.keio.ac.jp/en/com/class/schedule/emergency.html)

If an emergency event occurs after the start of classes, separate measures such as sending students home early or shortening the duration of lectures will be taken as circumstances dictate. Follow the instructions that are given via the campus broadcasts and put up on the bulletin boards and university website.

What to Do After a Major Earthquake

- Remain at the university. Do not attempt to return home if you are on university grounds following strong earthquakes of “lower 6” or greater on the Japanese seismic scale.
- If you are inside a building, do not go outside without good reason (it is safer inside, as the school buildings are quakeproofed).
- Contact your family or guarantor to let them know you are safe.
- Follow university instructions about when to return home, where to wait, how to pick up emergency supplies, or any other precautions or announcements.

If You Spot a Fire

- Shout “Fire!” to let those around you know.
- Press the nearest fire alarm.
- Distance yourself from the source of the fire and evacuate outside. Never use elevators.

When to Contact Keio IMPORTANT

When strong earthquakes of “lower 6” or greater occur in the vicinity of the campus where your undergraduate faculty is based, or when Keio deems it necessary, Keio will reach out to confirm that all students, faculty and staff members are safe.

In such cases, please inform the university of your situation via the link below as soon as possible.
